THE BEATITUDES ENGRAVED ON A GREAT STONE
BY THE LEADER OF THE T'AIPI'INGS

The large character means happiness or blessedness, and is used as a form of salutation outside many Chinese houses. The smaller characters are the eight Beatitudes. This is the only instance in which the Christian Beatitudes are known to have been publicly adopted in China. The lower white square on the left hand side is the seal of the Leader of the T'ai-p'ing Rebellion. The stone was set up at the entrance of the T'ai-p'ing Palace in Nanking. The Imperial Troops destroyed it when they captured the city. It measured eleven feet by nine.

This rubbing was presented to the Bible Society by Mr. Alexander Wylie, the Society's Agent at the time in China. It is here reproduced by the kindness of the Rev. James Thomas.
