

to the foreign and Chinese organizations in Shanghai and other places abroad.

It dates as far back as 30 years to the 11th of November, 1911, just at that critical time in China with the outbreak of her First Revolution at Hankow, when the Japanese Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai, was founded with 37 Members only; since then, weathering the storms of wars and waves of anti-Japanese movements which have visited Shanghai one after another, the Chamber has grown up until the total number of Members is reaching as many as nearly 600 at present, holding its position as the most influential institution representing the Japanese commercial and industrial circles in the greatest cosmopolitan city of the Far East.

INTRODUCTION

This marks the birth of the business directory edited in English for the purpose of meeting the increasing requirements recently of the foreign public to be supplied with detailed information of the Japanese traders and manufacturers in Shanghai. The 596 firms included in this book are all members of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai, but it may be said that by them almost all lines of commerce, industry and every other business connected therewith operated by the Japanese in this port of China are generally represented in this small volume.

The index pages of this directory are divided into two parts—Firms and Articles—arranged in alphabetical order with numerals indicating firm numbers, and, as to import, export and manufacture of each article and particulars of business of firms, readers are requested to refer to the items in the List of Firms.

As mentioned in the beginning, the publisher of "JAPANESE TRADE DIRECTORY OF SHANGHAI" desired to present to the world its first edition as speedily as possible to satisfy the urgent public need; consequently it may be too early yet to claim perfection of the present directory which has been rather hastily compiled, though no efforts have been spared to make it so, and we are confident that what is left to be desired in the first edition will be fulfilled or corrected in succeeding issues inviting any helpful suggestions and criticisms which may be offered by our readers as well as by all concerned.

It is also earnestly hoped that this new publication by our Chamber, very simple as it is, will prove to be of some service to the mutual development of international commerce and industry.

The Japanese Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai Functions

The Japanese Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai, under the constitution as outlined in the following paragraph, has been and is making constant efforts for the sound development of commerce and industry in Shanghai, and, especially, since the official enforcement in Japan recently of different economic controls, by which Shanghai has been considerably affected, the Chamber has at all times been playing a leading part acting in close concert with traders and industrialists here in China to do their best in the present difficult situation for the achievement of its primary object aforesaid.

Chairman
Yutaro Hanawa

Vice Chairman
Misao Aoki

The Standing Committee of the Chamber consists of 13 Members under Mr. Y. Hanawa, Chairman, and Mr. M. Aoki, Vice-Chairman, each representing their respective lines of business, and these Members belong to 4 Sub-Committees on Commerce, Industry, Finance and Transportation, in which are included also other Representative Members of the Chamber, who discuss and give their opinions or advices on questions in connection with their fields of business. In addition, the Chamber has 12 Advisory Members elected from every branch of professions and specialities, who will be called as occasion demands to participate in those Committees, and business affairs concerning the above mentioned systems are all transacted at the Offices of Chamber, which also attend to businesses respecting information, commercial certificates, enquiries, intermediation, recommendation and so forth in general commercial and industrial matters as well as negotiations and every other relative business
